Comes From Contrition and Belief in Forgiveness---He Went

Special to The Advocate. From Columbia.

Marion Parr has been the first white man to hang in South Carolina for eleven years. Parr suffered death as penalty for the murder of Clarence Shealy a mill operative at Columbia. Clarence Shealy was a boy only sixteen years old and his father is a native and resident of Lexington county. The murder for which Parr forfeited his life was so brutal and unprovoked that all petitions for clemency were denied. Marion Parr was personally known to many here having been in the employment of the Middleburg Mills in 1902. Parr left an insurance policy for $200 which was originally made out in favor of his wife but now stands in the name of his mother, owing, it is said, to trouble between Parr and his wife. A final family meeting for prayer took place in the jail on Thursday afternoon. Parr said that he forgave all who had ever harmed him and bore ill will to no one.
